

North-South Corridor and the Tri-County Parkway

The Committee for Dulles has been in existence for nearly 50 years and is dedicated to achieving the full potential of Washington Dulles International Airport and the economic growth of the region surrounding the Airport.

Washington Dulles International Airport is widely acknowledged to be a major economic engine for the Commonwealth. The Airport's ability to fulfill its potential is heavily dependent upon improved accessibility for passengers, freight, and employees. Improved north - south multi-modal transportation between I-95 in Prince William County and Routes 7, 50 and the Dulles Greenway in Loudoun County is essential for regional congestion relief and helps to fulfill the continued success of Dulles Airport.

Job creation and sustained regional prosperity are heavily dependent upon a mobile and accessible work force. Loudoun and Prince William Counties are among Virginia's fastest growing communities. The Metropolitan Washington Council of Governments projects that much of the region's future population and job growth will occur in or adjacent to these counties. Attracting and keeping cutting edge employers requires improved mobility. Currently, there are few north – south limited access roads. The Tri-County Parkway (TCP) will add to the opportunities to move people in the region while protecting environmentally sensitive areas and limiting access and egress. We support the development and completion of the North-South Corridor.
